Climate Risk

Securing your investment strategy for our new climate reality

Why it Matters

The climate emergency is an urgent global threat that cuts across sectors, industries, society, and the natural environment. As the world strives to meet the challenge of net-zero or net-negative emissions targets by 2050, momentum is growing behind efforts to decarbonise economies, industry, and infrastructure. Achieving these ambitious targets is fundamental to limiting warming of the planet to 1.5°C above pre-industrial levels by mid-century.

As the need for net-zero pledges to evolve into net-zero plans becomes clear and urgent under the emerging climate economy, financial institutions and private companies across the globe are increasingly under pressure from their clientele, investors, industry regulators, and governments to respond adequately and tangibly to the climate emergency. However, quantifying and offsetting physical, transitional, and reputational climate risk is a new and complex challenge for many firms.

We accelerate your climate risk journey to meet the multi-faceted challenges of the climate emergency and climate economy through our deep understanding of the implications for the financial sector, and our track-record of mitigating the risk and maximising the opportunities of the shift towards net-zero economies. Our commitment to our clients is to ensure that you have a firm and proactive grip on all aspects of essential climate-related legislation, policy, and guidelines such as the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures (TCFD). Our approach is to support you in getting where you need to be — from compliance to shared value creation and industry-leading good practice.

Our team of experts and thought-leaders put you ahead of the curve to make the most of the opportunities of climate-readiness and resilience while minimising and mitigating climate-related risk to your assets.
